Your Military at Work

The Portland Air National Guard Base is located on the south side of the Portland International Airport. The base was built by the Works Projects Administration (WPA) in 1936 and as an active duty base was used for training and submarine patrol to air defense from World War II through 1965. Today, the property is managed by the Oregon Air National Guard's 142d Fighter Wing but is also home to the Air Force Reserve 304th Rescue Squadron.

The 142d Fighter Wing defends our homeland with the F-15 Eagle jet fighters, providing 24-hour Aerospace Control Alert overhead the Pacific Northwest as part of the North American Air Defense system.

In addition to providing 24-hour Aerospace Control Alert for the Pacific Northwestern skies, the 142d Fighter Wing Airmen participate in state, federal and contingency missions when called upon to serve. As Portland's hometown Air Force, we are here and ready to serve upon a moment's notice!

Indirect Jobs Created

Indirect jobs reflects how money spent by base organizations and individuals ripple through the local economy, increasing the income of local businesses, which in turn allows them to hire new employees and do more spending of their own at their suppliers and other businesses. We measure this additional economic impact by estimating the number of indirect jobs created as a result of local base spending, and multiplying that by the estimated average salary in the Portland/Vancouver area. The estimated average salary in the Portland/Vancouver area is obtained from the Bureau of Labor Statistics. Indirect job multiplier is based on the size of the employment base for each region surrounding an installation and the general mission of the base.
